- (1) ユカ(Yuka)たちのグループは, 英語の授業で, 自分たちが考えた理想のアプリ(our ideal app)について, スライドを使いながら発表をしています。

< Yuka >

If you could create an app, what would it be like? We designed our ideal app which can make people happy. First, Kent will tell you how we designed the app, then, Maki and I will talk about what it does.

< Kent >

First, we asked our family, friends and teachers what kind of apps they wanted. We got a lot of interesting ideas. We found that about 30% of them wanted apps for housework like cooking and cleaning, 20% wanted apps for health, 15% wanted apps that help them save energy, water, or food, and 10% wanted apps for studying.

Second, we talked about what our app would be for. Maki and I thought it should be for family life, and Yuka wanted to make something good for the environment. So, we decided to design an app which can improve both family life and the environment.

< Maki >

I will explain what we can do with our app. It's called "What's for Dinner?" It recommends the best dinner for a family. By connecting our app with your refrigerator and each family member's smartphone, it can check the food in the refrigerator and each family member's health, and then it will decide the best menu for dinner and choose a recipe to use. If you send photos of your lunch to our app, it will give you a different menu for dinner. You can enjoy a good dinner with your family by using this app.

< Yuka >

Our app is good for the environment, too. It helps you save electricity. Also, it can help you reduce food waste.

We believe our app can make you happier because you can enjoy a good dinner and protect the environment. We hope that someone will make this idea a reality in the near future. Thank you for listening. Do you have any questions?

8 次のサトミ (Satomi) のスピーチを読んで、あとの(1)~(5)の問いに答えなさい。

Albert Einstein once wrote, "Life is like riding a bicycle. To keep your balance, you must keep moving." I am often encouraged by his words when I have a problem. I always try to keep moving forward. However, one time, (A).

Last summer, I visited New Zealand and stayed with a host family for three weeks. At first, I wasn't worried about staying there because I liked studying English and I believed I was good at it. But I could not communicate well with people there. I was shocked and felt very sad. I lost my energy and I didn't want to do anything. I felt I couldn't achieve anything in my life.

A week after I arrived, my host grandmother, Karen, talked to me with a smile. She said, "Satomi, do you have ikigai?" I was surprised to hear a Japanese word from her. I asked her why she knew the word. She said, "A few years ago, when I became sick and very depressed, one of my friends told me about the idea of ikigai. Then I learned more about it from some books. It helped me a lot to move forward." She also said, "Why don't you ask other people about their ikigai? You can ask, 'What is your purpose in life?' or 'What do you love to do?' or '(B)' I know you can do it."

During my stay, I asked many people these questions. People looked happy when they were talking about their ikigai, and I felt happy, too. At the same time, I found my English was improving. I thought that communicating with people and looking at people's happy smiles could be one of my ikigai. I found that my ikigai is related to other people's happiness, too.

After I came back to Japan, I read more about ikigai on the Internet. People around the world are getting to know the word because of some research that was done. Some researchers believe that having an ikigai makes life more exciting. They also believe people who have one are healthier and live longer.

According to a dictionary, the word ikigai means "something that makes you happy to be alive." However, in my opinion, the word has more meanings and it is difficult to explain in other words. So the Japanese word ikigai is used in other languages, too. For me, ikigai is something that helps me keep moving forward. Life is like riding a bicycle, so let's find our own ikigai and keep moving forward.
